Reads Like the Psalms

By Animal

Written over a course of several years by 20-year old Ben Courson. This thin book contains twenty chapters that read very much like the Psalms. Expressions from a young man pouring out his heart and innermost thoughts and desires to God. Ben is an amazingly gifted writer with a poetic style to his writings. Apparently a gift that his father noticed early on and prodded Ben to have published in this book. There were a few chapters where Ben wrote as if a particular character from the Bible had written their experience with Jesus. These I enjoyed the most. But, my favorite chapter was chapter 18 where my favorite quote in the book can be found: "Tomorrow is an empty canvas with the potential to become a masterpiece, and my present choices decide its fate." (page 111) Nothing too spiritual, but an element of truth spoken with such beauty. I look forward to seeing if Ben will write more great literary works. I hope he does.
