I love the unexpected twists that the story takes

By Marjorie Street

I just finished my second reading of 'Goodbye Belvidere: His Eye is on the Sparrow'. As with the first book in the series, 'Goodbye Belvidere: A Hundred and Sixty Acres', the second time through was as enjoyable as the first! I love the unexpected twists that the story takes, especially toward the end.

It is fascinating and inspiring that even the main characters in her stories are not 'white-washed', but display human imperfections as they face daily struggles and seek to please the Lord and follow His will for their lives.

Thank you, Joyce, for all of your hard work - and I'm looking forward to the third book in this series.
