SUGAR N' SPICE

REVISED MARCH 2016

Murder is horrific whenever it happens and in what ever circumstances. But when a murder is carried out by a young girl, not much more than a child, it is doubly horrific.

What is it that goes wrong in the lives and minds of these girls that grow up to be teenage killers? Girls who ruthlessly murder strangers, young children, parents, and others?"

In this short book of approximately 28,000 words, Sylvia Perrini has selected seven murder cases committed by teenage girls. The profiles of the girls covered are;

PAULINE PARKER AND JULIET HULME aka Anne Perry, the well-known author of murder fiction.

BRENDA ANN SPENCER

CHERYL PIERSON

HOLLY HARVEY AND SANDRA KETCHUM

CHELSEA O'MAHONEY

CINDY COLLIER AND SHIRLEY WOLF

teen age killers

By Ann`

Interesting stories about females who were in their teens when they murdered someone. Most interesting are the details of where they are today. Some are still in prison, some have been released and are living under new names. Some of these girls gave reasons that were absolutely chilling. "I hate Mondays" is one reason. Really? No remorse for this one. I'd recommend it.

Unexpected easy reading that kept me wanting more

By mccarty

I love mysteries so I just took a chance and I am glad I did. I can't wait to read all of these the rest of these reasonably priced and well written short true crime stories now. I'm hooked!!!

Needs a good editor

By Hotkat

Pretty straightforward, and one case to me is especially shocking because I feel as though the perpetrator not only got away with something horrific, but is now being rewarded. It is a good thing, I suppose, when a young offender gets out and does well. It is not good when said offender seems to exhibit no remorse and views her "outing" as an inconvenience instead of something for which to apologize. The bad side of this book is that the writing is pretty sloppy. There were numerous mistakes that even a cursory glance by an editor should have uncovered. Did I get the digital copy of the galley proofs, or something?
